HEMEROCALLIS OPHIR

Photographed at Hildemere August, 1934

WHAT! You are pitying me because I delve—
And dig, and slave—you call it—in the earth?
My garden is no penance, but my joy,
My faith, my creed,—religion, if you will.
What pictures are to artists, words to poets,
And melody to singers—this and more—
I worship in my garden here today,
Worship and serve—work my salvation out,
And heal me of the bruises of the world!
Yes, yes. I hear your church's eager chimes,
But do you listen to the conquering note
Which velvet hammers beat on lily bells,
And calls—and calls me to the garden close?
White-robed the choristers of cosmos pass,
And stately salvias chant a scarlet hymn,
While marigolds play on their brassy pipes,
And purple phlox give out a reverent note.
Look up! Look up! The wind chants to the trees,
My soul looks upward through my eyes, and sees
The illimitable glory of the sky.
Tell me, are you so close to Heaven in any church?
This is the great cathedral of my soul.

THE GARDEN THAT IS DIFFERENT

WE Gardeners gather inspiration all along our way. From the first thrilling bud of early spring to the latest bloom that lingers defiant of winter's threat, each changing season brings us new miracle of form and color. Flowers reward their possessor a thousand-fold.

In presenting our catalog again this season to you, our now large clientele, there is no need that we stress the quality to be found in our Hildemere grown plants. Both from your frequent enthusiastic expression and from your sending us so many of your neighbors, we know you value our plants and we are glad of this opportunity to thank you for your appreciation. To any not yet acquainted with the Hildemere Gardens we extend an invitation to visit us, confident you will find here inspiration for the solution of your own garden problems.

For a number of years we have been designing and planting gardens, giving to them our personal supervision. We have now assisting us a graduate in floriculture of Pennsylvania State College, whose skill in arrangement together with definite knowledge of plant requirement we highly recommend. While making moderate charge for landscape service, we are glad to give without charge suggestion or advice to any who desire to consult us here at our Gardens.

Within reasonable radius of Hildemere we deliver by automobile on orders of $5 and upward. We feel however that whenever practicable you will prefer to come yourselves to our Gardens where you may see the plants growing and make your personal selection.
